Over 500,000 people die in the UK each year, however projections estimate that the death rate will rise by 17% from 2012 to 2030 across the UK, with more deaths expected in the over 85's, rising from around 32% in 2003 to 44% in 2030.

It is therefore imperative that home based end of life care services are available with health and social care staff working jointly to provide service users and their family an integrated approach to end of life care.

Staff should be well-trained and able to support service users wishing to stay at home when nearing the end of their life.

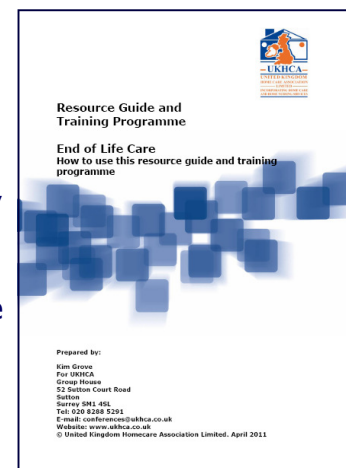

To try to assist domiciliary care organisations to improve their knowledge and skills on all aspects of end of life care, UKHCA have developed an End of Life Care Resource Guide and Training Programme which has been designed to ensure care staff are trained to a high standard.

Delegates at this workshop will receive the training programme—which includes a resource guide, trainer's handbook, a PowerPoint presentation and a CD containing the entire course.

The workshop will go through the key elements that trainers and care staff will need to be aware of and trained in, to deliver high quality end of life care services so that domiciliary care organisations can become a key part of the provision of multidisciplinary services to those nearing the end of their life enabling service users to die at home if this is their wish.

Delegates attending this workshop will receive a copy of UKHCA's End of Life Care Resource Guide and Training
